A QUICK glance at Katharine Hepburn's list of lovers in a soon-to-be-released biography might prompt fans to wonder where the woman found time to make movies, reports The Philadelphia Inquirer.

According to Katharine the Great, due out Valentine's Day from Blood Moon Productions, the late actress' many conquests included Claudette Colbert, Ernest Hemingway, John Ford, Greta Garbo, George Stevens, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Judy Holliday, John Barrymore, Robert Mitchum, Judy Garland, Burt Lancaster, Robert Ryan and Paul Henreid.

Hepburn was one busy bisexual, claims author Darwin Porter.

In addition to her legendary love affair with Spencer Tracy, Porter writes, she had a lifelong romance with American Express heiress Laura Harding.

She also had a sexual attachment to close friend Irene Selznick, wife of producer David O. Selznick, the book says; the two chums liked to break into Hollywood mansions for fun.

First lady Eleanor Roosevelt had a crush on Kate, Porter notes. But then again, if this unauthorised bio is to be believed, who didn't?
