Canadian police authorities are concerned about the fundraising campaign of Sri Lanka's Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) in Canada, according to the National Post.

Despite the Canadian government's repeated statements that it is against funding terrorism in other countries and that it is taking "all possible" steps to prevent Canada from being used by terrorist organizations to kill people in other parts of the world, it appears that the Tamil Tigers are flourishing and nourished, supported by the continuing activities of their Tamil supporters living in Canada.

It is time the Canadian government had some gumption and named the LTTE as a terrorist group in Bill C-36.
